1. fe/de[the first letter could be translated as a f or d] reticent volcano keeb[s] [the letter b might be a spelling error]
2. his never slumbering blan [again the letter b might be a spelling error]
3. confided in his broiects [here too the letter b and i might be spelling errors] bink [the letter b might be a spelling error]
4. to no brecaious[the letter b might be a spelling error] man

Only considering the Jules Verne’s version of the Icelandic runes and assuming these are spelling errors in the words: keeb[s][keeps], blan[plan], broiects[projects], bink[pink] and brecaious[precarious]; the text could be deciphered as:

- fe/de[the?] reticent volcano keeps, his never slumbering plan, confided in his project pink , to no precarious man.

or moving the words:

- ❖ No reticent man keeps his precarious, slumbering pink volcano, never confided in to his project plan.
